WELCOME TO THE 2022 SCOTTISH CURLING CHAMPIONSHIPS

On behalf of Scottish Curling, I am delighted to welcome you to the 2022 Scottish Curling Championships in Dumfries.

This event has been a long time coming as it should have been in Dumfries last season but was cancelled, so it is great to be here at last. This is the first time the championships have been held in this venue and I am sure that the team of volunteers and staff will look after us well and put on a quality event. The organisation of this event has been a great partnership as we have worked with Dumfries Curling and Dumfries and Galloway Council, both of whom have gone the extra mile to make this event extra special.

This year we have six men's and six women's teams competing in a double round robin tournament for the national titles. The calibre of curlers playing is certain to make for an exciting week of curling. We will also be welcoming school children from across Dumfries to watch the games and get involved on the ice in the curling hall. Dumfries Curling will also be running try curling sessions for those who have been inspired by the Olympic Games. These can be booked at TryCurling.com. Tickets for the week can be purchased here - We are asking everyone to do Lateral Flow Tests at home before heading to the venue.

I would like to wish good luck to all the players in this prestigious competition as well as all of the people behind each team that has enabled them to reach this stage. Good curling everyone and I hope that all of the spectators enjoy thrilling games this week.

We were all thrilled by the Team GB results from the Winter Olympic Games and following on from their great medal success hope to see them and their medals here in Dumfries in the latter part of this week. Looking ahead, we will bring you the Scottish Mixed Doubles Championship in Perth 2-6 March and hope you will get behind our Paralympic Team, who will be competing in Beijing 5-12 March.

2022 SCOTTISH CURLING MEN'S CHAMPIONSHIP

Team Whyte head to Dumfries as the highest ranked rink in the competition, currently sitting world number 9 after a successful first season on the Grand Slam Circuit where they qualified at the likes of the Boost National and GOSC Masters. Skip Ross Whyte hails from Dumfries and will travel to his home rink straight from his alternate duty at the Beijing Winter Olympics. Team coach Greg Drummond is set to fill in for at least the first few days of competition to allow his skip to regroup after the Games. Team Whyte currently receive British Curling Podium Potential funding but are yet to reach the play-off stage at a Scottish Championship.

While they'll be trying everything to change that record this year, their biggest opposition could come from the field's veterans Team Paterson. The line-up is by far the most experienced with skip Ross Paterson having represented Scotland/GB 11 times, six of those with medal success. His rink too are familiar with the world stage with 10 appearances for Kyle Waddell (eight medals), and eight for Duncan Menzies (five medals) while Craig Waddell played alternate at the 2019 European Championships where Scotland won bronze. Team Paterson are currently ranked 25th in the world, but have struggled this season, not qualifying at either of their two grand slam events.

Looking to cause an upset and prevent a bookies favourite young hot guns Team Whyte versus veteran Team Paterson final are Team Craik. The rink heads to Dumfries with the kudos of being reigning Scottish Junior Champions and current World Junior Bronze Medallists. Their participation was abetted as a by-product of the postponement of the 2022 World Juniors, relaxing Team Craik's late March/early April and allowing the squad to focus on a national title assault.

Former Team Craik third Mark Watt will also be competing at the Ice Bowl with his newly formed rink. He brings the experience of three Scottish Juniors appearances and the aim to put his fresh line-up in a positive position.

Having lost out to Team Craik at the last Scottish Juniors, Team Strawhorn will be out for revenge. A current National Academy Team, they are set for their Scottish Championships debut in Dumfries.

Another National Academy Team will be present in Team Bryce, now a five-person rink with Callum Kinnear and Luke Carson helping the team out after David Baird had to step back this season due to work commitments. Team Bryce have collected experience on the European Tour this season, competing in Latvia, Estonia, Czech Republic, Switzerland, and are a fixture on the national stage with Cameron Bryce a former Scottish Junior Champion and the team's best result at the Scottish Championship a third-place finish in 2018.

2022 SCOTTISH CURLING WOMEN'S CHAMPIONSHIP

There are a lot of unknowns on the women's side with shuffling of teams due to injuries, illness, retirements and so forth. Fay Henderson's foursome has been stable this season and hence come to Henderson's Dumfries home rink in a relatively comfortable position. Despite being relatively newly formed line-up, the reigning Scottish Junior Champions are displaying formidable performances on the European Junior Circuit this season, winning in Prague and St Gallen.

Team Henderson will be taking the fight to British Curling Podium Potential squad and bookies favourites Team Morrison. The rink set-up is a fresh one, Rebecca Morrison, Gina Aitken, and Sophie Sinclair having previously played together in the BC nine-women squad of the 2020-21 season and Sophie Jackson coming in at lead last December. Nevertheless, they were semi-finalists at the recent Bernese International Ladies Cup and come to the Ice Bowl with plenty of kudos: Jackson and Sinclair are Scottish Champions from 2019, Morrison finished runner-up at the 2020 event, and Aitken took the national mixed doubles title no less than five times.

Team Farmer too have final-aspirations when the newly formed rink, comprised of long-time curling partners Beth Farmer and Kristin Bousie teaming up with 2019 Scottish Junior Champion Emma Barr and 2020 Junior triumphators Robyn Munro and Laura Watt, takes to the ice. Farmer is a former World Junior B Champion, finished third at the previous Scottish Championships and recently skipped her team to win the Consolation Cup at the Bernese Ladies International.

Yet another new-look line-up in British Curling Performance Foundation Team MacDonald will contest at the Ice Bowl. Skip Amy MacDonald was part of the Team Morrison rink that triumphed at the 2018 Scottish Juniors while third Eilidh Yeats finished runner-up at the last edition of the national championship.

Team Blair, a hot outsider rink at the most recent Scottish Juniors that eventually finished second, brought in former national runner-up Jennifer Marshall for an experienced and wise head at second. Three of the four players in the team skipped by Lucy Blair are currently supported by the National and Regional Academy.

Finally, Jenni Cannon is making her comeback to the ice this year after some time away from the sport, having been selected onto the Regional Academy Programme. Team Cannon are a line-up of five promising curling returnees who are back to see what they can do.
